Her father, Samuel Freeman who also attended Gallaudet and graduated in 1878, went on to be the superintendent of the Georgia School for the Deaf in Cave Springs where he served for 37 years.

He also founded the first church for deaf persons in Atlanta which is now named the Freeman-Crusselle Church for the Deaf. Mrs. Simmons taught at the Georgia School as well and after the death of her father took over the leadership of the church.

Accompanied by her son and daughter-in-law with whom she now lives in Georgia, Mrs. Simmons visited with the Alumni and Public Relations staff.

The Center will also engage in research activities with other agencies, provide opportunities for graduate students to serve as research assistants and offer an annual post-doctorate fellowship.

Formal and informal colloquia will be offered on a regular basis, and the first colloquium will be on Thursday, October 28, at 3 p.m., room 352 HMB. King Jordan will discuss, "A Comparison of Instructor versus Student Paced Instruction for Introductory Psychology." All are welcome.
